JOHN GIBLETT,

HOW TO DEPEND ON TIME!!! LET E. D. COHEN repair your watches, and you will not be deceived with regard to the precise time, as all the watches repaired by him are sure to give satisfaction. At the City Hail of Arts, watches, clocks, and musical boxes of every description are repaired in a workmanlike style and at just charges, E. D. C. being the only shopkeeper in Sydney who is also a general workman; and having had twenty six years practical experience in all the branches of his business.

and having had twenty-six years practical ex-perience in all the branches of his business, he undertakes to make clocks and watches of the most complicated construction perform correctly, or to make no charge.

The celebrated Astronomical Clock (the City Guide) is going to mean time. Any person may have his watch regulated free of charge.

HOW TO SEE YOUR WAY CLEAR. USE E. D. COHEN'S SPECTACLES. His Establishment is the only Optical and Spectacle Manufactory in the colony; any sight can be suited at the City Hall of Arts. The greatrisk in buying Spectacles from those persons who know little or nothing of the nature of Optics, is only found out when the sight is injured, and the proper way to preserve this, the most valuable faculty of the human frame, is to deal with men who understand their art, and are really workmen.

BRAZILIAN PEBBLES FROM NO. 1 TO 15.

It is simply this—to deal with them as, in the exercise of our unprejudiced judgment, we believe they deserve. True to our motto, we are "sworn to no master." We are wedded to "no sect." We have no party predilections. Our object is to promote the welfare of our adopted country; and in our examination of public measures, our "plan" is to consider how far they are "plan" is to consider how tar they are calculated to promote or to frustrate that object, and in the one case to commend, the other to censure, from whatever and in the other to censure, from whatever "public men or public bodies" they may have emanated. If the self-same men and the self-same bodies happen to be so little endowed with infallibility as to put forth good measures one day and bad measures another, we see no inconsistency in the plan" which in the first instance bestows encomium, and in the next pronounces in the "men and bodies" he deals with.
But the Atlas would have these men and bodies viewed by public writers accoming But the Atlas would have these men and bodies viewed by public writers according to a "settled estimation," derived, "after sufficient time has been given for observation," from " their individual acts." Granted—provided the acts be of "settled" character. If they be uniformly good, let them be uniformly lauded; if uniformly bad, uniformly blamed. This comes fully within the scope of the "Herald's plan;" but as the Herald has failed to discover any uniformity either in the Executive Go. uniformity either in the Executive Goits plan has necessarily forbidden either indiscriminate censure or indiscriminate praise. The character of public men and public bodies, as displayed in their acts, like that of private men and private bodies, like that of private men and private bodies, is seldom either all light or all shade.

Mankind rejoice in the light of Bacon's philosophy, but shudder at the murk cloud of his judicial corruptions. We may admire Napoleon's Code, whilst we execrate his sanguinary ambition. And herein there is surely no inconsistency with that principle of "settled estimation" for which our contemporary would take credit to himself at our expense. Until we can learn that the measures of Sir George Gipps and the Legislative Council are either all brightness or all gloom, and not, as we have hitherto thought, alternately one and the other; or until, like certain of our fellow-warriors in the corps of the Press, we can be persuaded to swear allegiance to some political "master," to some set of party antipathies and predilec-

GENERAL REMARKS.

TURSDAY, 7.—Morning cloudy, light airs from westward, then south-east, and got north of east A.M., and r.M. blew very fresh from north by east; clouds disappeared A.M., and remained clear through the day and night.

WEDNESDAY, 8.—Moderate northerly breezes throughout, and fine clear weather.

THURSDAY, 9.—Close and sultry all the foremon; shout noon wind freshened from northeast, and continued to blow fresh till after nine o clook, when chopped round to southward and blew very heavily through the night. Fore patt, bright starlight, and the comet was perfectly distinct, as likewise it was the two previous nights. Latter part night, thickly overcast.

Fairnay, 10.—Strong south to south-south-ling explosion. A portion of this storm went castward, whereas, some part appeared to go back to northward almost to the same quarter from whence it originated. Light breezes kept up from north-east subsequently, and between nine and ten storm and clouds began to clear off. Midday, sunshine and pleasant mild day. Afternoon, moderate breezes from north-north-east, and sky grew very dark and gloomy in west, with lightning early part of night.

MONDAY, 13.—Moderately fresh breezes forepart, about north by east—north-north-east;

MONDAY, 13.—Moderately used to be part, about north by east—north-north-east; veered more easterly towards midday; and r. a blew very fresh latter part. Hasy damp air and partially clouded, morning and evening. Night

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—We perceive that Mclbourne will not want for a resident candidate to represent her in any future Council, as Alderman Korr, editor of the P. P. Patriot, has intimated his intention of coming forward. The P. P. Hereid and Patriot are at it again; and the following are two of the morecanz with which their readers are embertained:—

POUT PRILLIP.—Yesterday's mail brought as papers to the 7th instant. The proprietors in the Geelong district were about to import one hundred of the distressed labourers and mechanics from Va.1 Diemen's Land: contracts had been entered into for the purpose of their removal.—Some anxiety was felt as to whether Mr. Therry would or would not take his seat as Resident Judge of the district. It was intended, if he did so, to make a public manifestation of regret at the departure of Mr. Justice Jeffeott.—We perceive that horses which had been brought over from Launceston realised good prices,—from twenty to twenty-eight guineas each.—Wool was selling at 2d per lb. below the prices realised by auction in Sydney: this was attributed to the fact of the Bashs charging 7½ per cent. on merchants bills.—We have received the first number of the Port harging 74 per cent. on merchants' bills.—We save received the first number of the Por have received the first number of the Port Phillip Shipping Gazette.

THE POLICE COURT ROOMS.—These rooms have again undergone a thorough repair; a wooden roof has been substituted for the plaster celling, which by its frequent falling created no small slarm in the breast of the magistrates who usually preside in these rooms. The walls have also been coloured with pearson the whole a light siry and the plant siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the whole a light siry and the street of the stree

CHARGE OF FORGERS.—Alfred East, who has been some days in custody of the police on a charge of forgery, was yesterday allowed bail to appear on the 24th instant, himself in £80, with two sureties in £40 each. The delay in the case being proceeded with is caused by the illness of a material witness.

of that paper to deliver to subscribers, but had not accounted for any of them.

Committals.—Yesterday, Charles Kinalow, Francis Collins, and James Goulding, all free by servitude, were committed to take their trial, for having, on Friday last, between one and two o'clock, P.M., assaulted and robbed a freed man, named Brown, in Sussex-street; the amount of money stolen from the man was about £2 16s. Sarah Whitby, lately become free, and Rosannah Hampery, an assigned convict, were both sommitted to take their trial for shoplifting, on Monday last. It appeared that the prisoners went in company to the shop of Madame V. Protois, in Hunter-street, about seven o'clock, P.M., and while one of them (Whitby) took off the attention of the prosecutrix by pricing sundry articles, the other prisoner (Hampery) contrived to abstract a piece of French ribbon, containing about fifteen yards, from a ribbon-box on the counter, which she passed to her companion a few minutes after she had taken it. The prisoners were followed by Mrs. Protois' shop-girl into Pitt-street, where they were accused of stealing the ribbon, and taken back to Mrs. Protois' shop by a constable who had took charge of them, when one of them offered to pay for the ribbon, while the other said she knew nothing about the inacter.

Bushianging.—Yesterday morning, a man supposed to be a bushranger, armed with an open clasp knife, contrived to gain admission into the residence of the Rev. Dr. Sueele, at Cook's River, and demanded the money in the house to be given to him. Two of the servants in the house, hearing what was going on, made their way through one of the windows to let loose the dogs, which being observed by the intruder, he made a precipitate retreat. He wore a regatta striped shirt and white trowsers. A FAMLY Schwa.—Robert Macfarlane, aluas Cadby, appeared before the Mayor, yesterday, on a warrant, at the instance of Elizabeth Macfarlane, his wife, charged with a breach of the Cadly, appeared before the Mayor, yesterday, on a warrant, at the instance of Elizabeth Macfarlane, his wife, charged with a breach of the peace on the evening of new year's day; the complainant stated on oath that she had been living apart from him for nearly five years, in consequence of his ill-using her: that he had formerly attempted to sell her, and was constantly watching about her house for the rurpose of stealing one of his own children, of which she was the mother, and which she had to ought up without any allowance from him. He had already been twice bound to keep the peace towards her. The defence set up by the defendant was, that she had sent for him to stop with her on new year's night, to which he had agreed; when he went out, met some friends, got grougy, and returned to her house, she refused to atmit him, and got some of the neighbours to beat him. The Bench ordered him to cuter into sureties to keep the peace neignouse to one turn. The Bonon ordered him to enter into sureties to keep the peace towards the couplainant for twelve months, himself in £20 with two sureties in £10 each. A SAMPLE OF A POLICE COURT COMPLAINANT.—Margaret Holmes, free by servitude, had been given in charge to constable Goebert, at six o'clock, on Saturday evening, by a man received from a man named M'Laughlin, a coachbuilder, in Pitt-street, to pay for an advertisement in Bell's Life in Sydney, on or about the 7th instant. It was also stated that the prisoner had obtained one hundred copies of that paper to deliver to subscribers, but had not accounted for any of them.

CONNITTALS.—Yesterday, Charles Kinalow, Francis Collins, and James Goulding, all free by servitude, were committed to take their trial, for having, on Friday last, between one and two o'clock, P.M., assaulted and robbed a and robbed a denied having any knowledge of the lord, proued that when she first became a lodger in his hovse she was in the practice of stead man, named Brown, in Sussex, street: she denied having any knowledge of the infant. John Murphy, the prisoner's landlord, proued that when she first became a lodger in his howe she was in the practice of sitting for a long time at once, but latterly she appeared to stir about more actively than at first. Mrs. Hannah Samuell, proved that the prisoner had been living with her about tive weeks ago, and then admitted that she was in the family way by a stableman named James Lee Farmer, at present employed in driving Mr. Long's horse and dray. After leaving witness's house she told witness she had got a place as a needlewoman. A week ago Mr. Murphy, one of the preceding witnesses, called on witness to see the prisoner, who was then very bad, when some conversation took place respecting her (the prisoner's) condition. On Sunday last the prisoner again called on witness, and informed her that she had been delivered of a still born infant, but did not say what had been done with the body, only she said she had been to be churched, and went away; soon after she had left witness heard from Mrs. Murphy of the body being found. When witness spoke to the prisoner, on Tuesday week, of the condition she was in, she said the child was still, and in her opinion it was not alive. Ellen Fenton Murphy: Had been a fellow-servant with the prisoner, and about a fortnight ago she came to lodge with witness: she corroborated the testimony of the preceding witness as to her going for the latter to see the prisoner on Tuesday week, but denied having paid any attention to the conversation which then took place between the prisoner and Mrs. Samuell; the witness denied all knowledge of the prisoner being enceinte. Timothy Slattery, of Clarence-street, proved hearing a groaning from a woman in the closet where the body was found; he heard the noise on last Sunday week. Dr. Silver, of the General Hospital, had made a post mortem examination of the body, which was the subject of the enquiry: the body was at such a state of maturity as would have enabled it to support separate exi ort separate existence if born alive; the quantity of it on the sea-coast and inlets navigable for boats. The capital in the colony was excessive: ye: we could not, or rather we did not raise our own bread and huxtery, without help from Van Diemen's Land and England.

Tallow, as an export, was a discovery; and the colonist who first practised it ought to have a dinner, and a piece of plate. The sacrifice of the carcass made it a discovery.

Lard is no discovery; yet the fattening of pigs principally for the production of lard, as an export, has never yet been practised.

If the colony be too hot for wheat, it is not so for maize, potatoes, and numpkins. The consumption of these is not equal to their supply. Hence the ruinously low price this season.

so for maize, potatoes, and pumpains. And consumption of those is not equal to their supply. Hence the ruinously low price this season.

Tens of thousands of bushels of maize, during the last three months, have been sold at a shilling a bushel. Consumed by the growers in the pigstys, the careass salted down, and the lard exported, they might have got a fair return for their labour and capital.

Lard is now used by English curriers in preference to oil. Lard, like tallow, is of many qualities, and of many prices. Pigs fathened on potatoes, or Swedish turnips, (especially when not steamed), produce an inferior oily lard, fit only for the curriers. The lard of a pig fed on dry maize meal, is the whitest, richest, and hardest in the world, and fit for every purpose.

Although the subject of this letter should be read and thought worthy of attention by merchants and graziers, the class who are to create lard will never hear of it. The graziers and country storekeepers, therefore, should give information and advice to the little settlers in their neighbourhood, and offer to accept their lard at a certain price in payment for their reat, or for supplies of necessaries advanced them.

Merchants, having debtors in the country, should inform them that lard will be considered by them as good payment, equal to tallow and

I ou, Gentlemen, by your exertions, caused tallow to become is one year a great export.

Lard is capable of becoming a still greater export, For tallow is limited by the price of wool and meat. The production of lard for the next half century is as illimitable as the market to which it is to be sent. I therefore call on to which it is to be sent. I therefore call on you to notice this letter, and to advert to the subject at least once a month, till its contents get to be universally considered by the non-readers of newspapers in remote parts—I mean the little frechold and tenant settlers.

Rent in money in this Colony is not an equitable, and therefore not a politic payment. The poverty of the tenant settlers (clearing leasers) and the uncertainty of our seasons, render a money rent injudicious. Let landlords agree to take their rents in lard,—the price rated according to the article on which the pigs have been fattened.

port separate existence if born slive; the lungs when immersed in water floated both whole and when cut into parts; the heart was so soft and pulpy that one of its cavities could not be traced; the accidental twisting of the umbilical cord round the neck during the time of labour was the cause of the death of many infants; there are causes besides natural respiration which may cause the lungs of infants to float; the body was in such a state of putrefaction when witness examined it that he could not say whether the infant had breathed after birth or not. But judging from the lungs alone, he should say breathing had taken place. Mr. Samuel Maberly, Surgeon, of Market-street West; Had seen the body of the infant in the closet where it was discovered; the umbilical cord had a turn round the neck of the child; the body was then in a state of rapid decomposition, there To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald. to these facts. All the witnesses said that the deceased was sober. Dr. Gwynne also deposed as to the nature of the accident, the fact of tetanus coming on, and that death was produced by locked-jaw, caused by the injuries received by the fall. There was no other evidence of importance, and the Jury consequently returned a verdict in accordance with it—Accidental Death.

Parramatta, January 14, 1845. To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Bereld GENTLEMEN,—By the Herald of this morning perceive that Gaffer Gray has once more a peared in your columns.

perceive that Gamer Gray has once more appeared in your columns.

After a sound aleep of some days and nights, he has awakened into active life—resumed his pen—has put to see again, and in a wild, unmeaning, reckless way, sails under the visionary colours of the philosopher!

Gaffer's philosophic attempt to explain away the cause of complaint on the part of the flockowners of the colony, with respect to the systematic lowering, or, as he classically terms it, dousing the exchange must fall to the ground, before the attabloration, and at the particular season of each succeeding year, when the annu. I flosse is brought to Sydney for sale; and that that lowering takes at one fell swoop, and in a direct and sudden way, from the pockets of the flockowners of the colony, in number about three hundred, the enormous sum of £40,600, as stated in a former letter of mine to you. Of this fact Gaffer has taken good eare to ster clear, for the good reason, no doubt, that he would not defend an act which, to any the last of it, is unseemly on the part of certain parties.

NOTHING SO CRETAIN.—[From our Paris Correspondent.]—We are informed by a remarkably fine officer in the National Guards—(the gentleman, by-the-by, is also a remarkably small dealer in coke and charcoal)—that, in the event of a war, it is intended to placard the Paris fortifications with "lists of impositions upon English visitors," under the conviction that, if they could not keep the British out of Paris, nothing else would.—Punch.

A THRESHING MACHINE.

A property, like the one just faithfully described, needs no embellishment at the hands of the auctioneer; although the sterling and valuable qualifications, which each portion of it possesses, would well bear out all he might say on the subject.

Its locality, situated as it is within one mile of the flourishing town of Liverpool, in the very centre of an extensive agricultural district, and on the great road leading to Campbolliown and the southern interior, must ensure the mill a neverfailing trade—its easy access from Sydney (only two to three hours' quiet drive) renders it most desirable to any party wishing for a healthy and comfortable home in the country, the resources of which would at all times afford an income, and as a resting place to fatten eatile or sheep prior to their being offered in the Sydney market (for which almost any of the lots are available), it might most certainly be very perfitably employed.

A chain of ponds, never known to fail even in the dryest seasons, and the George's River, afford at all times an ample and abundant supply of water. The land is all excellent, as a proof of which the present season's crop of wheat grown upon it has not been surpassed by any in the colouv.

which present themselves both at the front and the rear of these houses, cannot possibly be surpassed in the colony.

On the one side may be seen our beautiful Domain (foremost in which is Sir Richard Bourke's Statue), the Government Gardens, the North Shore, the Heads, Woolloomooloo, the Ocean; and though the picture, is our magnificent Harbour, alive from morning to night with ships, and various craft, arriving and departing from and to all quarters of the world. CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

BEFORE Mr. Justice, DICKLISCO.

RUEDEN.

Lucius O' Brien, late of Sydney, in the colony of New South Wales, labourer, was indicted for having, on the 19th of December last, made an assault upon one Joseph Meyrick, by shooting him in the right side of the back with a pistol, thereby inflicting a mortal wound of the breadth of three inches and of the depth of six inches, of which said mortal wound the said Joseph Meyrick then and there died.

The prisoner having pleaded not guilty, the panel was called over, and the following Jury were sworn:—Henry O'Brien, (foreman): Henry Phillips, Henry Pugh, William Chapman Preston, Poter William Plomer, William Paton, William Paton, Dennis O' Brien, Prederick Oakey, William Pattison, and James Presentil

Prederick Oakey, William Pattison, and James Pemsell.

The prosecution was conducted by the Attorney-General and Solicitor General, and the defence by Messen. Windeyer and Michie.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL opened the case on the part of the Crown. The evideace as to the fact of the murder, he said, would be very short, and very simple. Dr. Meyrick, who had just returned from the South Seas, happened, unfortunately for himself, to be walking in Hunter-atreet, when he met his death at the hands of the prisoner. That the prisoner was the person who fired the pistol, and thereby caused the death of the unfortunate gentleman, there could be no doubt; but there was a total absence of all motive for such an act, as far as

"All not hear distinctly; believes it was "I'm the person," or something of the kind.

Captain J. B. Vylea: Saw the second pistol fired, and seised the prisoner immediately afterwards; he was cool and collected, and continued so while being conveyed to the watch-house; prisoner had no opportunity of taking say thing on his way to the watch-house, and although questioned by several persons returned no answer to any.

David Pedem: Heard the firing of the first pistol and picked up the weapon, which the prisoner let full; did not hear the suport of the second pistol.

Inspector Wright, of the Sydney Police, identified the pistols produced as those which had been taken from the prisoner. On cross-examination the witness said that he had known the prisoner for some time, and had always observed that he wore a gloomy and reserved appearance; about two years ago always observed that he wore a gloomy and reserved appearance; about two years ago witness had taken the prisoner by a warrant instead of one of his brothers, but the prisoner did not ettempt to undeceive him.

Henry Calvert: Took the prisoner into custody immediately after the firing of the second shot, and conveyed him, with the assistance of Captain Vyles, to the watchhouse; prisoner appeared to entertain no alarm, and had no opportunity of taking anything on his way to the watchhouse.

John Harper, shopman to Mr. Bowden, proved the purchase by the prisoner of half-adosan pistel bullets at Mr. Bowden's shop some time before the day of the murder; the value of the bullets was only a halfpenny, but a prisoner threw down a penny and refused to take the change.

Sergeant Griffiths, of the Sydney Police: Was in charge of the watchhouse when the prisoner was brought in, and had him searched; all that was found upon him was 17s. in money, a few percussion caps, some memorands, and some other triffing satisfies; the articles produced in Court are those taken from the prisoner, but part of the money had been expended by order of the Coconer to meet the coach hire for converging the prisoner to and from the Inquest. After having been placed in the cell, the I risoner called for water, which was brought him, and he dramh about two pin: within about intervals of mach other, lying on the ground as he did so the coach other, lying on the ground as he did so the coach other.

veying the prisoner to and from the inquest. After having been placed in the cell, the prisoner celled for water, which was brought him, and he drank about two pin: within short intervals of each other, lying on the ground as he did so. Afterwards Mr. Francis O'Brien came there and requested to see his brother but witness refused to allow this without gistrate's order. Having referred Mr. O. on to Mr. Miles, the latter came over, and a.r. O'Brien, with witness and anc. x constable, went into the feel' to the prisoner; the latter was lying on the floor and refused to get up; Mr. O'Brien said, "Lucius, my dear boy, what have you been doing—what made you commit this rash dead?" No repty laving been made to this quantion, Mr. O'Brien and, "Keep up your spirits, Faush, T'm done;" and Mr. O'Brien laving precised him strongly to explain what he meant, told Mr. Miles that he tend the prisoner replied. "It is no use keeping up my spirits, Faush, T'm done;" and Mr. O'Brien with the meant, told Mr. Miles that he meant, told Mr. Miles that he meant, told Mr. Miles that he came the prisoner had been taking poisses. On fauther question, the prisoner adjusted to a faint roles that he dat laken amenic or to the first and the came in the lift is builted. Afterwards, he admitted to his brother that he had taken the poison from a vial "just before he shot the man." Several medical men arrived, and the stomach pump was used by Dr. M'kellar. Prisoner told his brother that he had bought the poison two or three days ago, in George street, at Mr. Aitken's. The prisoner answered all questions rationally, but appeared to be in such a state of exhaustion as not to desire being pressed with questions. The prisoner was very weak after the stomach pumping was over, and was not able to dress himself when dry clothes were brought, his own being wet by the water used in pum-"-you this stomach. In the evening witness 1 and a quantity of saliva in the cell where the prisoner had been confined, intermixed with which there was a quantity of white powder, wet, and in lumps, as if not long cast up. Dr. Campbell was sent for, and after testing some of this powder in the flame of the lamp, and producing a smell like garlie, he took some more of it away with him for the purpose of further testing; it by a chemical process.

By Mr. Winderswa: Prisoner had been about twenty minutes confined when Mr. Francis O'Brien came; could not say whether either of the other brothers were then present; prisoner appeared wild and frightened when he was brought into the watch-house; witness asked him his name, and he made no answer, being apparently too much confused.

Mr. Campbell, surgeon, of George-street, corroborated the evidence of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the flame of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testin brought into the watch-house; witness asked him his name, and he made no answer, being apparently too much confused.

Mr. Campbell, surgeon, of George-street, corroborated the evidence of the last witness as to the finding of the arsenic and the testing of it in the fiame of the lamp; witness picked up about twenty-five grains, and ten grains would have been sufficient in ordinary cases to destroy life; was satisfied from subsequent tests that the powder was really arsenic; from the appearances witness felt convinced that it had been cast up from the stomach; arsenic might remain half an hour in the stomach without destroying life, and might even have remained an hour; but if life was not destroyed undersuch circumstances it would be a most extraordinary case. When an excessive dose of arsenic was taken, it was apt to be thrown up.

By Mr. Michitz: There was more arsenic on the floor than witness collected.

Sergeant Griffiths re-called: Alderman Flood was precent when the prisoner was being

By Mr. Michie: There was more arsenic on the floor than witness collected.

Sergeant Griffiths re-called: Alderman Flood was precent when the prisoner was being searched, but did not go into the cell with the prisoner's brother; no one saw the prisoner until Mr. Miles came; the prisoner's brother had no opportunity of handing anything to him. Inspector Wright: Saw Alderman Flood and Mr. O'Brien go into the cell within five minutes after the prisoner was confined; Mr. Francis O'Brien did not come to see the prisoner till after witness had gone away, but witness met him on the road.

Sergeant Griffiths re-called: Was quite sure that no person had gone into the cell before the arrival of Mr. Miles; the cell door had only been opened before to give water to the prisoner.

Frederick Mackellar, Surgeon: Knew the deceased, and saw him just before he died; saw the prisoner the same morning, when he came about eight o'clock to enquire for a young man who resided with witness, relative to an account, when witness said the young man was over at his mother's, and that if he (prisoner) went over there he would be paid; prisoner said he would go, and went away. Witness used the stomach-pump at the watch-house, and while giving the prisoner some brandy and water, after the operation was over, witness asked him several questions. Prisoner told him that he had taken arsenic from a bottle in the morning; but when witness asked him why he had shot Dr. Meyrick, he refused to say anything more, but groaned, and turned his face to the wall. The symptoms of having taken arsenic would appear at the farthest in an hour. Arsenic generally produced vomiting as soon as its action commenced, as it was strongly irritating to the coats of the stomach; a large dose would not be likely to produce a more speedy vomiting than a small dose; if arsenic would anyte as the farthest in an hour from that he usually exhibited. His answers to witness in the watch-house were quite collected.

Edward Smith Hall: Knew the deceased, and remembered the circumstance of his death; knew the prisoner, whose brother had married one of witness's daughters; did not know where prisoner lived; neither the prisoner nor Dr. Meyrick visited at witness's house; Francis O'Brien kept a store at No. 610, George-street, and witness saw Dr. Meyrick there about four times when witness was present. Prisoner never went to this store to witness's knowledge, and witness did not think he could have had an opportunity of knowing Dr. Meyrick.

By Mr. Windevers: Had not known much of the prisoner of late, but known intermediate the first prisoner took his meals with witness for about nine months at this place, which was a farm of his brother's; he had been his brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at Billiane Water, and talking to himself artivincapacity for business, and habit Plighter His for a young man, had often see 2s of idleness, remarkable.

By the as nonorable struck witness as hothing but canned any drive to reform but The prisoner had many during to nerform but The prisoner had many during to perform but.

he never performed those duties efficiently. It was only once that witness had seen the prisoner walking in the rain and talking to himself.

This closed the case for the Crown.

Mr. Windynan then proceeded to address the Jury for the defence. He feared, that notwithstanding it was then four o'clock, they were only beginning the real matter of enquiry: for they must be convinced by what they heard that the friends of that unhappy young man did not contemplate denying that his was the hand which deprived the community of Dr. Meyrick. He should have been prepared indeed to admit this, if supported by less evidence than that which they had heard. He quite admitted the importance of the enquiry, as one which concerned the whole community; for while it behoved them to guard those persons from being held responsible for their actions who could not have been so held answerable by a higher tribunal than any earthly one, it was equally imperative that they should guard most carefully against the possibility of insanity being feigned as a cover for crime. He quite admitted that the law of the case was as stated by the Attorney-General; and that the time of committing the crime the prisoner was mentally conacious of his responsibility to the laws of God and the laws of man for such an act. He should be able, according to his instructions, to produce before the Jury such a mass of evidence as could not fail to convince the Jury beyond all doubt of the prisoner's insanity: for he should trace his history backwards up to the very time that he was at school, and should show that his habits had been always the same. It was much to be regretted that the relatives of the prisoner had failed to observe the mental defects of the prisoner, and to adopt measures for his care; but it was to be feared that, like Mr. Hall, they had attributed his habits of inattention and neglect of business to pure idleness, and they now too late discovered the error into which they had fallen. He should be able to prove that the prisoner had never po had heard out of doors. He then concluded by calling the Reverond Thomas Bodenham, a elergyman of the Church of England, how residing at Pitt Town, who stated, that in the year 1838 he was in the habit of attending St James's Grammar School duily, and remembered the prisoner there, he being then a pupil at that oftablishment; his manners were different from these of any how witness ever aw; he from those of my boy witness ever saw; he would, while in his class, lounge and rell himself about in an unnatural manner, and he mischief to them if the prisoner became much excited.

By the Soliciton-General: Would have thought that the prisoner was between seventeen and eighteen, and the elder of the other boys was not more than thirteen. The prisoner appeared to be in advance of the other boys in point of education, and generally studied by himself; but witness had nothing to do with him in this respect; had never seen any very violent gusts of passion.

John Monahan. Was in the employment of Mr. Francis O'Brien in the years 1841 and 1842, and saw the prisoner there, who had charge of the stores, but frequently neglected his business; prisoner went out frequently at night, as he said, opossum hunting, but witness never saw him bring any orossums home; had seen him coming home at six o'clock in the morning, as if out all night; the prisoner was generally known by the name of "Mad Louey;" among other habits the prisoner had, was that of picking up and carrying home insects and reptiles which other persons would destroy; witness used to see these animals tied up in a yard behind the house, sometimes alive, and sometimes dead; had seen the prisoner dancing what he called the highland fling upon a public wharf in the day time, and in sight of houses where females resided; when some comical story was being told to the prisoner, he would often break off suddenly, exclaiming "Oh the little gods," and would walk away without listening any further; if two or three words only were at times spoken to the prisoner, he would often dart off, springing over the fences with perfect case.

By the Arronxey General: The prisoner was sometimes present at the weighing out of the rations, but seldom attended to it much; had seen him reading; night was the proper time for opossum hunting; had seen some of the men employed on the farm bathe with the prisoner, but there were no women there at that time.

By Mr. Micrite: The prisoner was out generally of a night, and often without a gun, but never brought suitees: had seen the reisons of the men comployed on th but never brought game of any sort; opposum hunters generally select moonlight nights only for their sports.

Matthew Lewis: Was in the employ of Mr. Francis O'Brien at Brisbane Water at the same time as the last witness; had seen the prisoner dancing at the water's edge and rush foolishly into danger on many occasions; the prisoner acted as overseer, but was a very bad one, and did not do justice to his brother at all; had seen the prisoner break off in the middle of a conversation, and run away whirling a stick, with his head down; had seen prisoner put repulies into a box for the purpose of keeping them, but afterwards, totally iorgetting what he had done, would have allowed them to starve; saw the prisoner on one occasion cutting up a bee with a razor; the prisoner was forgetful in everything, and witness during the whole of the cighteen months had never known him to carry out and finish anything that he had begun; he was also very lonely in his habits, and would run away if any strangers came there; had seen the prisoner eat meat which was really rotten and say it was beautiful; prisoner never behaved like a man in his right mind.

By the Soliciton-General: Had often seen the prisoner go opossum 'hunting, but never saw him with a gun; prisoner never became intoxicated, and although witness had frequently offered him rum he had always reason. Alderman Broughton gave similar evidence to that which he had been his brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at By the had been him brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at By the had been him brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at By the had been him brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at By the had been him brother's overseer; witness had seen him walking in the rain at By the had been him brother's overseer; witness had seen the prisoner, and the raining of the pistoner was of very singular habits; among other things he used to go on the roof of the house and lay a long time on his back; when asked about it he would say he had been looking at the strong self-of looking parameters. So only once that witness spoke was eighteen months ago. The prisoner had many duties to perform, but he never performed those duties efficiently. It was only once that witness had seen the prisoner walking in the rain and talking to himself. tity; one morning witness had asked the prisoner to breakfast with him as he was going to Sydney, and prisoner walked in, sat down in Mrs. Hargure's place, poured out the tea, and finished his breakfast, without saying anything or waiting for them to join him, although witness and his wife were present.

By the Attornmy-General: The roof was a sloping roof, but rather flat in its construction; did not believe it was customary to sleep outside.

a sloping roof, but rather flat in its construction; did not believe it was customary to sleep outside.

John Brown: Was employed as a compositor at the Monitor office, in 1838 and 1839; had frequent opportunities of observing the manner of the prisoner, who was considered to be out of this mind; about a week before Dr. Meyrick's death, witness saw him, and his manner was the same as ever; he passed by witness's house in a wild and frantic manner; had seen him about four or five times within the last two or three months, and had observed the prisoner to have a solemn walk, looking sometimes as if he was lost; he was called "cranky" at the Monitor office.

By the Soliciton-General: The prisoner used to come into the office without any apparent object, and could be persuaded to do anything; they could persuade him to spend money, to recite pieces, and to play; sometimes the prisoner was sulky, and would not speak to them at all.

William Samuel Proctor: Had for several years been an Inspector of different Hospitals in the colony; had known the prisoner for the last five years, and had had frequent opportunities of observing his conduct; knew the prisoner at the Monitor Office, where his manner was always particularly reserved, and he seldom apoke to any one unless previously spoken to; he appeared of an exceedingly melancholy turn; witness had seen a great many mad people at the Hospitals, and from his experience he should say that the countenance of the prisoner bore the character of insanity.

By the Solicitor-General: Was at Newcastle Hospital for about two years, where there were sometimes as many as twenty mad people; one person that witness know to be a lunatic was similar in features to the prisoner; had seen the prisoner in the streets of late, and observed him to go straightforward, stalking on, and compelling everybody to move out of his way rather than he out of theirs; the appearance of the prisoner was always melancholy and reserved.

Richard Tarrant, apothecary, carrying on business at Brickfield-hi prisoner to go two or three days together winout food, while at other times he would not ouly feed voraciously, but appeared to care but little what it was. The sense of touch appeared very defective, and he not only held money or small articles in a peculiar manner, but was in the habit of fumbling a long time over a kaot before he could untie it. At times the prisoner would be very sulky towards witness, and for two months together he had never spoken one single syllable to witness, although they were together 18 hours out of the 24.

Witness had often spoken to him about insanity, and upon these occasions the prisoner would allude to the reports as to his own insanity, and would attempt to refute them, but in so doing he would appear to labour under great awe, like a child listening to a ghost story.
Prisoner was very fond of his brothers and family, and wished, as well as he could, to advance their interests; during the last six months, however, prisoner had grown very savage and morose in his manner, and impatient of all centrel on the part of his brothers; about three weeks before Dr. Meanist death retirence.

Richard Tairant, apothecary, carrying or ousiness at Brickfield-hill, proved that on the 17th December the prisoner came to his sho and purchased half a pound of arsenic, which and purchased half a pound of arsenic, which he said was for the purpose of poisoning rats. By the ATROMENT-GENERAL: Observed nothing peculiar in the prisoner's manner; the prisoner signed a receipt for the arsenic—the receipt produced was the one in question.

George Harris: Has been above three years and a half in the service of Mr. Francis of Brien, in Sydney, with whom the prisoner resided; he (the prisoner) was in the habit of playing tricks with persons coming to the office on business; when persons came to answer advertisements the prisoner used to write notes requesting the parties to whom they were addressed to send the bearer further; prisoner used also to dance what he called the Highland fling in a state of nudity; the used likewise to imitate the aborigines in various ways; the only thing which he ever commenced and completed, to witness's knowledge, was to write a sheet of paper (the size of a newspaper) full; when at Brisbane Water the prisoner was aware that in so acting he would be violating the established law, but that he used likewise to initiate the aborigines in various ways; the only thing which he ever that he knew nothing of a future state, nor did he believe in such a state; had heard prisoner tell his brother that he (the prisoner) hated him. they were addressed to send the bearer further; prisoner used also to dance what he called the Highland fling in a state of nudity; the used likewise to imitate the aborigines in a various ways; the only thing which he ever commenced and completed, to witness's knowledge, was to write a sheet of paper (the size of a newspaper) full; when at Brisbane Water the prisoner was frequently, prowling about at night, and sometimes brought home bandicoots; prisoner had frequently gone so long as two days without food, and at other times would eat immoderately; he had frequently gone for a fortnight without washing or changing himself, saying that the dirt kept him warm; prisoner was called Cranky Louey; about six weeks ago, prisoner called on witness at about two o'clock in the morning, and having woke him, was about to go away, when witness jumped out of bed, collared him, and asked him what he did there; he replied that he came for a pipe and some tobaceo; prisoner had been in the habit of calling on witness, and generally went away about ten o'clock, when he often staid about the streets till one or two o'clock in the morning; on the morning of Dr. Meyrick's death, prisoner asked witness: to go to Mrs. O'Brien, and sak her to grant him a private interview with her at eleven o'clock; witness saw Mr. O'Brien, who went to Mrs. O'Brien, and came back with a note, which he gave the prisoner; this note he handed to another person to read, and it appeared to contain an intimation that the interview he asked for would be granted; the note produced was the one in question; witness gave him another note from Mr. Francis O'Brien, and upon reading this hesaid he was very sorry, as he should have liked to have had another interview for the last time; this note appeared to be a refusal of the interview; prisoner had at this time a telescope on the table which he prisoner was getting worse since April last, and he had been in the oliok at poportunity of observing the prisoner; he appeared a curious and distant person, voiding all so tell his brother that he (the prisoner) hated him.

William Bland, Esq., surgeon: Had heard most of the evidence during the present trial, and judging from that evidence should certainly not think that a person of whom such acts could be spoken could be of same mind; such a person might be conscious of a difference between right and wrong, but his knowledge would be of no use from his labouring under strong influences, over which he could have no control; had seen the prisoner in gaol before this trial and considered him insane; but should have been afraid to pronounce an opinion upon so short an observation; should have thought the prisoner a proper person to place under restraint.

short an observation; should have thought the prisoner a proper person to place under restraint.

By the ATTORNEY-GENERAL: Had asked the prisoner several questions, to which his answers were vacile and unsatisfactory; had formed his opinion from the whole of the evidence which had been given; should think that from infancy there must have been some defect of the sensorium indicative of unsound mind, and probably an increasing functional derangement; his state of mind might have been at first only slightly demented, but had become by degrees a confirmed lunacy; it frequently happened that persons so situated could recollect clearly a whole series of facts, up to a given point, when all recollection would cease. This sort of thing would often continue even after the recovery of the Jerson; the length of time which intervened threw no doubt on wincess's mind as to the taking of the a perfect recovery had taken place under such circumstances; the taking of arsenic was generally followed by immediate excitement, and in one case, which had come under with nose's own experience, the medical gentleman who was first called in had pronounced it a case of drunkenness.

By the Couar: Under such a state of mind as had been described, witness did not believe that a person could commit an act such as had been attributed to the prisoner, and be containly or heavenly tribunals.

Dr. Nicholson: Hadheard the evidence for the defence, and from that evidence had come to the irresistible conviction that a person evincing such a state of mind must be insane; he decidedly could not be responsible for his actions; witness was of opinion, from the history of his moral perceptions, that he was incapable of judging between right and wrong.

By the Solicetron-General: Had come to this opinion, first, from the absence of all appamoral perceptions, that he was incapable of judging between right and wrong.

By the Solicttor-General: Had come to this opinion, first, from the absence of all apparent motive for the act; the series of acts which had been exhibited for the last six or seven years, would also lead witness to this conclusion, though the twentieth part of the evidence he had heard that day would lead him to such a conclusion; witness's deliberate opinion was, that the prisoner's insanity existed to such an extent that he could not know the difference between right and wrong; from the history of the case, witness would not know the difference between right and wrong; from the history of the case, witness would not hesitate to say that the disease was congenital; should doubt, if in confinement for a length of time, that his mental health would entirely return; the same principle of insanity which would lead him to saicide, would probably act to induce him to take the lives of others; the cunning of madmen might account for his mentioning the fact of the poison and concealing that of the firing.

Mr. Cartwright, Surgeon: Did not think that a person to whom the evidence which had been given referred could be sane; did not think such a man could be considered responsible for his actions.

By the Artonyay, the Mantal Had formed had remained the same ever since; prisoner frequently refused to answer questions which were put to him.

John Hall: Had known the prisoner some years, who had been in the habit of calling upon witness on business; his manner was very peculiar, and he frequently neglected the orders for advertisements which witness gave him. He was wild and visionary in the ideas which he expressed, and his manners were anything but those of a man of business. He was varied in his dress and appearance and was equally varied in his manner of collecting accounts: for sometimes he would ask for a settlement in the most gentlemanly manner, while at others he would come most haughtily and demand payment; he often did this after he had been really paid.

Joseph Raphael: Knew the prisoner Lucius

In adjusting and demand payment; he often did this safer he had been really paid.

Joseph Isphael: Know the prisoner Lucius of Dirice, and had had frequent opportunities of observing his conduct; had often seen him in the street waving his arms, as if he was addressing somebody; prisoner used to appear this in the street waving his arms, as if he was addressing somebody; prisoner used to appear the prisoner is stronge, and very different growth of the prisoner; considered that the prisoner is prisoner was in the habit to a prevention of the prisoner; considered that the prisoner is prisoner was in the habit to include the prisoner; considered that the prisoner is the prisoner is the prisoner is the prisoner is the prisoner in the prisoner is prisoner was the prisoner was passing and described her in several different ways. This occurred about a formight to three well-before Dr. Meyrick's death.

James Brown, of George street: Knew the prisoner of the prisoner of some time; became figure the prisoner of some time; became figure to the prisoner, having that the contained of the prisoner is the prisoner and his prisoner, having that the prisoner, having that the contained of the prisoner is the prisoner and this prisoner, having that the prisoner is the prisoner that the prisoner is the prisoner in the prisoner is the pri quently agitated from what would appear to have been a violent passion by the efforts which it took to suppress it; after these gusts of passion had subsided he would be for several hours silent, and would not answer anything that was said to him; witness never saw any tangible reason for those gusts of passion, which generally arose from some trivial contradiction; he also possessed no power of completing anything which he commenced; on one occasion he commenced an account between his brother and some man for £20, which took him three weeks, and after all he did not complete it properly; the least obstacle, such as pen, ink, or paper, being out of the way, appeared to be insurmountable, and, indeed, sufficient to stop him in any task which he had commenced; this want of power to complete what he commenced arose from constitutional inability, and not from any feeling of laziness; the prisoner, who was an excellent awimmer, once commenced making a pair of tin paddles in order to enable him, as he said, to go along like a shark, but he did not complete this work; prisoner had likewise a theory of perpetual motion, and one night he kept witness awake till three o'clock in explaining his views as to the divisibility and destructibility of matter—his theories were all very vague and undefinable. He was subject to fits of abstraction, and would burst out of these fits by singing snatches of songs to a wild and melancholy air, and he would frequently dance what he termed the Highland fling, but which was really a most tremendous physical exertion. Had known the prisoner to go two or three days togother without food, while at other times he would not only feed voraciously, but appeared to care but little what it was. The sense of touch appeared in their opinion insane at the time of firing the pistel;—and accompanied their verdict with an expression of opinion that he was insane at the present time.

The prisoner was then remanded until the pleasure of His Excellency be known.

The above case occupied the Court from the time of its opening until two o'clock on Tuesday morning, with the exception of an adjournment for a quarter of an hour between one and two, and for an hour at half-past six, for the purpose of refreshment.

Before their Honors the Chief Justice and

Before their Honors the CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice Dickinson.

James Ducal was indicted as an accessary after the fact to the murder of Thomas Warne by one John Vidall. The information contained a set of counts similar to those in the information under which Vidall was convicted on Friday last, describing in various ways the murder which was then said to have been committed by the latter, and there was a final count, reciting the conviction of Vidall and charging the prisoner at the bar with having, with a full knowledge of this fact, aided, abetted, and concealed the said John Vidall, for the purpose of cluding the due course of justice.

The prisoner having pleaded not guilty, the justice.

The prisoner having pleaded not guilty, the following jury were empanelled:—
Itobert M. Pite (foreman), Edward O'Hara, James Powell, Thomas Perkins, Joseph Oxley, John Peck, David Peden, William Onus, Thomas Parker, Robert Porter, Joseph Onus, and Charles Saul Phillips.

The case for the Crown was conducted by the Attorner-General, and the defence by Mr. Lows, who, with Mr. Want as attorney, had been assigned by the Court for that purpose.

pose. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL briefly stated the greumstances of the case as proved on the trial of Vidall, and the bearing of the evidence then the property of given upon the case of the present prisoner.

Mr. J. B. Hutchinson, the second clerk of the Supreme Court, was then called, and produced the original information against Vidall, with a memorandum on the back to the effect that he had been found guilty and sentenced to death.

Upon the Attorney-General applying to have this information read,

Mr. Lows objected to the course proposed, on the ground that the conviction could only be proved by the record, the document then tendered being nothing more than a mere metendered being nothing more than a mere me-savage and morose in his manner, and impatient of all control on the part of his brothers; a wout three weeks before Dr. Meyrick's death, prisoner loft his brother's house and went no one knew whither; the day before this circumstance, prisoner came to the house in a great hurry and saw his brother, but when he went away, after stay of a fiw minutes, his countenance was frightfully livid with passion.

By the Salterrox-General: Did not think that the prisoner had any sane views of right and wrong; had heard him say that he would think it no sin to destroy a wife if she deceived him, and that he was, in his own opinion, the only judge in such matters, without reference to the laws of God, or the laws of man; believed be proved by the record, the document then tendered being nothing more than a mere memorandum upon the information, made by the officer of the Court.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said, that the course he intended to have adopted was to have proved the ventiet by the Clerk of Arraigns, but although he had told that officer of it a few minutes before, he was absent. If he had proved the case in this manner, he should have been prepared to contend that in this case there was no necessity to make up and produce a second no necessity to make up and produce a second record previous to the trial of the prisoner at the har as an scensery, and even at present he submitted that the document tendered was relied with Mrs. Duval, the wife of the prisoner.

Sergeant Nugent, in addition to his former testimony, stated that when he entered Warne's house with the prisoner and Vidall, the former clapped his hands together, and said "My God, there's been something doing here;" witness remarked that they had been killing somebody, and Duval, dipping his fingers in some blood that lay on the floor, said "this blood is the same colour as that which is coming out of the box;" the smell of the place was very offensive; on their way to the watchhouse the prisoner told witness that Vidall had hired him to convey the box to the North Shore to meet Warne. On cross-examination witness stated that Duval went willingly with him to Warne's house, and did not appear at all frightened when he was going up stairs.

Thomas Wilson, a native of the Isle of France, had been a shipmate of Vidall's, in the Lady Blackwood; had never been at Warne's house till the Sunday evening in question, but had heard Vidall speak of him very highly on board the ship, saying, that Warne would help him without payment. On the evening in question, witness was standing near the Plack Dog, public-house, when Vidall asked witness if he wanted a job, telling him, that if he would carry a box to the Waterman's Wharf he should have one shilling and sixpence; witness agreed to do this; Duval was present at the time but did not asy

Waterman's Wharf he should have one shilling and sixpence; witness agreed to do this; Duval was present at the time but did not say anything; witness then went with them to to the house, and staid in the room while the box was brought to him by Vidall; Vidall dragged the box out by himself, but witness could not see what Duvall was doing; this was in the large room, and it was very dark; witness and Vidall got the box down stairs, and they carried it between them until they came to the Dockyard, when Duval gave witness a spell as the box was very heavy; did not perceive any upleasant smell in the house at the time, but noticed an unpleasant smell coming from the box, and asked what was in it, when Vidall said it was per; witness was present when the box was put in the boat, and when the waterman subsequently refused to take it; did not hear Duval, who was standing by, say anything; heard the prisoner and Vidall said living teacher have by, say anything; heard the prisoner and doubt talking together, but could not under-stand what was said, as they spoke in high French, while witness only understood Creeks French, while witness only understood Creeks

French.

The Prothemotary then produced the record of the trial, conviction, and sentence of John Vidall for wilful nurder.

This closed the case for the Crown.

Mr. Lows then proceeded to address the Jury for the defence, and commenced by expressing his gratification that the separation of the cases of Vidall and the prisoner then at the bar had saved the latter from the dangerous and diagraceful position of being placed on his trial as a principal in the murder. The Attorney-General appeared now to be himself conscious that there were no grounds for charging Duval as a principal, and the more the

M. Vaillant had known the prisoner a year, and believed him an industrious, humane man, but with weak intellect.

Several other witnesses were called, whose evidence corroborated that already given, as to the good character of the prisoner, and this closed the case for the defence.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL waved his right of reply.

The CHIEF JUSTICE told the Jury, that the first matter of fact which they would have to find was, that a murder was really committed by John Vidall, and this they would have to do of their own opinion, independent of the former verdiet, although the record of such verdiet was prima facte evidence of the fact. If, after a consideration of all the evidence, the Jury should be of opinion that Jen Vidall really committed the murder, he next fact to be determined was that of his conviction, upon which point, he (the Chief Justice) would refer them to the record which had been placed in evidence. The next question, and that which affected the prisoner most materially, was the charge that the prisoner knowing of the crime which Vidall had committed, did aid and assist the murder in cluding justice, or in concealing the evidence of the crime. If with a knowledge that the box really contained the body of Mr. Warns, he had used exertions to get it over to the North Shore, he would be an accessary after the fact, but it was essentiat to this that he should be aware of the crime having hear committed. fact, but it was essential to this that he sh

North Shore, he would be an accessary after the fact, but it was essential to this that he should be aware of the crime having been committed. Of the prisoner's guilt, the Jury must be assured beyond all reasonable doubts, before they could find a verdiet against him; but, on the contrary, if they found any circumstances warranting any reasonable supposition of inaccence, he would be entitled to an acquittal. His Honor then proceeded to advert to the leading points of the evidence, again telling the Jury that they would not be justified in finding a verdiet of guilty, unless they felt an irresistible conclusion to that effect from the circumstances they heard defalled.

The Jury, without quitting the box, found a verdict of not guilty.

The Critar Jury contract told the prisoner, that he belief on the part of the Jury that he was really innocent. It appeared from the evidence, that the prisoner had hitheyto borne an excellent character, as as this character had now stood him is good stead, it was to be hoped that he vouldes whe value of maintaining it during the remainder of his life.

The prisoner was ther, discharged.

The prisoner was ther, discharged. Court adjourned at a quarter half-past nine this morning.
